Importing into the USA

All goods coming into the USA must go through Customs and are subject to Customs duty/taxes/fees. The clearance process involves: entry, inspection, appraisement, classification, and liquidation. You will need to declare a value for the merchandise and determine the classification number of the merchandise being shipped.

Customs and Border Protection recommends using a Customs House Broker. Customs House Brokers are licensed by Customs. They are hired by the client to transact Customs business on their behalf in the importation or exportation of merchandise.

A Customs House Broker will:

- Help you determine the correct way to classify your shipment
- Calculate estimated Customs duties and taxes
- Complete/Submit Customs paperwork
- Act as your agent with transportation providers and Customs
- Require a Power of Attorney to transact Customs business on your behalf
- Arrange delivery (upon arrival)

To clear your goods with Customs you will need to provide:

- Arrival notice from shipping company who issued your bill of lading
- Bill of lading (can be “original,” “seaway,” or “express”), airway bill, or carrier’s certificate (naming you as consignee)
- Commercial invoice (should show value and description of goods)
- Entry manifest, Entry/Immediate Delivery, or other required Customs forms
- Packing list and other supporting documents which will be used by Customs to determine whether merchandise should be admitted into the USA

For more information on importing into the USA visit Customs and Border Protection:

Import Information: http://www.cbp.gov/xp/cgov/import/infrequent_importer_info/

Export Information: <http://www.cbp.gov/xp/cgov/export/>

Questions: <http://www.cbp.gov/xp/cgov/toolbox/questions/>

If you need assistance determining your classification number, please call Customs and Border Protection at (206) 553-0203 and ask to speak to an Entry Specialist.

Exporting from the USA

If you are exporting from the USA to a foreign country, we suggest the use of a Freight Forwarder.

A Freight Forwarder will:

- Arrange booking with ocean carrier (you may choose to do this yourself)
- Arrange drayage of shipment to terminal (you may also do this yourself)
- Complete Customs Paperwork (Export declarations, export licenses, etc.)
- Act as your agent with transportation providers
- Require Power of Attorney to transact Customs business on your behalf

Ocean Carriers

You should discuss with your Customs House Broker or Freight Forwarder their suggestions for an Ocean Carrier. You may need to contact a carrier yourself to establish rates for your shipment. A list of Ocean Carriers calling the Port of Seattle may be found at
